PARDON OUR DELAY!

We regret that our newsletter is coming to you nearly three weeks late this month. This issue was delayed for the installation of our new printer -- a Quadram Quadlaser. It is attached to our IBM PC/XT and we expect it to do great things for us in the future. For those of you who are computer buffs, this printer features 2 megabytes of memory -- 1.5 for the controller and 512 k (kilobytes) for font storage. It can download up to 60 fonts (software controlled) and will emulate several popular printers, including the Hewlett Packard Laserjet and the Epson FX 80. Since the Hewlett Packard emulation mode has not yet arrived, we are printing this newsletter in the Epson FX80 graphics emulation mode. We think you will believe the results were worth waiting for -- especially when you see forthcoming issues done in 300x300 dot resolution (90,000 dots to the inch in text and graphics mode!). We appreciate your patience!

IN THIS ISSUE

This issue will primarily feature information on New Age trends within the United States Military. We had planned to make this only half of an issue, but in view of the statistic quoted by Arthur Egendorf in his 1985 book HEALING FROM THE WAR that "eighty of our best generals have been trained in the most advanced consciousness principles of the New Age", we feel it warrants an entire dedicated issue. Evangelical developments will be postponed until the July newsletter. This month we are also starting to publish my itinerary. It may be sketchy, except as to city and date initially. I must confess that for the past four years I have had a bad habit! I have written on my calendar only the city of destination, worried about catching the plane, and let the local coordinator fret about the itinerary. I am therefore including information on how to contact the local coordinator so that you may obtain extra details in case I am in your area.

Burns' Military Career

After finishing college, Frank Burns served two tours in Vietnam as a Green Beret. He says he initially intended to serve minimum time in the Army. However, his promotions came so easily that he decided he could do more to further his radical political aims inside the army than he could outside. Consequently, he stayed a full twenty years, retiring as a lieutenant colonel. During the second year of his Vietnam tour, Burns set his sights on a job as commander of an undesirable California stockade. Burns got the desired promotion. He then promptly moved to turn it -- Fort Ord, California into a Human Potential Movement laboratory. Between Burns' two Vietnam tours, he had become very interested in the type of work (sensitivity training) that was being done by encounter groups. He studied gestalt psychology (entailing a sudden belief or "paradigm shift") under Fritz Perls at the Michael Murphy founded, Tavistock imitating Esalen Institute at Big Sur, California. And he had completed his master's degree in Texas where he was able to gain field experience by leading sensitivity training encounter groups at a Texas prison. Burns' promotion to the Fort Ord commander assignment coincided with the work of people he had met at Esalen who were instituting "sensitivity training" into the business world under the euphemistic title of "Organizational Development" (OD). Burns hired some as consultants for his Fort Ord post, thereby illustrating another of the myriads of means of financing New Age work. He also gave stockade

TASK FORCE DELTA

Task Force Delta or the Delta Force had its roots in the Mt. Pleasant, Michigan college days of SDS organizer (Students for a Democratic Society) Frank Burns. Suspended from the ROTC squadron he commanded for his radical political activities, he was reinstated only upon promises of future good behavior and a promise to work within the system. Frank Burns was also a fervent student of Zen Buddhism and considered himself to be one. Although he rejoined the establishment ranks, it was with the intent of changing it from within and using the army as a tool to implement his radical political philosophies. Burns' SDS involvement had extended to assistance in drafting the infamous Port Huron Declaration.

inmates human potential training using course names such as "How to Beat Your Court Martial" and "How to Con Your First Sergeant". His off-duty time was spent at the Esalen Institute. He gave that organization undeserved respectability by making presentations for it in full military regalia.<1>

Burns was still part of the military when its post-Vietnam malaise hit full-force. Seizing what occultist Carlos Castaneda called "that one cubic centimeter of opportunity" Burns took advantage of the distress to push his Human Potential Movement concepts among top military brass. He was promoted to a Pentagon post, "senior organizational effectiveness consultant" for the army, working directly out of the Chief of Staff's office! The Esalen OD experiments (sensitivity training, a/k/a organizational development) were now to be promoted service wide. As Norman Boucher writes in NEW AGE JOURNAL, "As usual, Burns knew what strings to pull." Out of this the Delta Force was born in 1980:

"Our mission statement," says Burns, "said something like, 'Understanding that the Army works through people, how can it close the gap between current levels of individualism and organizational performance and potential levels of performance?' That was broad enough to give the generals something that sounded good while giving Burns and company the opportunity to do pretty much whatever they wanted so long as Delta Force continued producing interesting monographs and concept papers. And because I, and a number of us, were already pretty well committed to the whole human-potential movement and systems theory and applied behavioral science, we naturally used Delta Force as a legitimate reason for looking into those areas in greater depth. We also looked into areas in which we had a curiosity but had not had a chance or the authorization to look into them. Take biofeedback, for example. We identified one of the experts in the world on this subject, who happened to be an Army major, and we made him part of our group. What we would do is find experts and bring them into our network and have them teach us."<2>

Even if you never before heard of Task Force Delta, Burns or the Human Potential Movement -- another name for a significant and the most narcissistic portion of the New Age Movement -- you have undoubtedly heard many times the slogan Burns coined which was "Be all that you can be in the Army." It was born from Burns' conversation with a two-star general at the Pentagon about "the holistic soldier."<3>

Task Force Delta, the organization that spawned the First Earth Battalion is definitely an official army entity. McRae says:

"Members communicate via the army computer network. 'Deltanet,' the official designator of the U.S. Army Delta Force Computer Conference and Electronic Mail Network, has over a thousand members, who call themselves 'the tribe'."<4>

Burns has now retired from the Military. But his influence continues and widens as he uses the credentials and contacts made in the military to give credibility to his work and spread "The Work" through corporate America. That is another story which will be picked up in a later issue of NEW AGE MONITOR. It, its ideas and influence have not been limited to the military.

FIRST EARTH BATTALION

It was out of Task Force Delta that the First Earth Battalion was born. Burns had the idea that the ideal soldier would combine training in martial arts and meditation. Lt. Colonel Jim Channon, himself a former recipient of SDS honors, was assigned by former SDS'er Frank Burns to carry out the task and in the process investigate California New Age groups to pick up the "best" of their ideas. New Agers are most excited about the Battalion because it offered a legitimized channel for gaining respectability for parapsychological concepts.

According to Ron McRae, author of MIND WARS, parapsychologists have used three techniques of gaining respectability. They are:

(1) A "solid repeatable experimental demonstration."

(2) A "revolutionary new theory in one of the basic mainstream sciences... a theory that indicates psi must exist..."

(3) "Applied psi."<5>

The third factor is the reason leaders in the New Age Movement had such high hopes for the First Earth Battalion. McRae explains that this "de facto recognition" will be gained by moving out of the laboratories and into industry and government, demonstrating that psi can solve problems."

In 1979 the army had a problem. McRae says:

"Ninety percent of the soldiers who operate and maintain the army's seven thousand nuclear weapons in Europe flunked basic tests of their military skills that year. This is an appalling statistic, but it should come as no surprise. For years, the all-volunteer army had been failing. The army of 1979 was an army of misfits -- uneducated, ill-trained, and illiterate. It was an army that, according to its own secret estimates, would 'not be taken seriously by our allies or our adversaries.'"

Not surprisingly, a proposed "solution" would come to that dilemma from a unique career class within the military -- the futurists! The solution they, under the leadership of Delta Force founder Frank Burns, advocated was the "First Earth Battalion."

The First Earth Battalion was conceived by Lt. Colonel Jim Channon as part of his Delta Force "brainstorming." Channon was ideally suited to the task. Star-quality handsome, and the son of a West Point graduate, career military man, Channon had taught communications skills for seven years at the War College in Carlisle, Pennsylvania.<6> In preparation for his work, Channon visited more than 130 California New Age groups "doing social experimentation."<7> From these groups, Channon culled his ideas for the "New Army" -- one that would be sworn to uphold "people and planet" rather than "duty, honor, country." In his video tape, Channon explains away this rather obvious violation of a military oath by saying that "national boundaries are finally getting in the way of peoples on the planet to survive."

Those admitted to the First Earth Battalion are sworn to uphold the credo of "high commandos and guerrilla gurus." Their initiation entry oath reads:

"I have the capacity and therefore the duty to contribute to the development of myself, my associates, and our planet, simultaneously, now!"

"I take personal responsibility for generating evolutionary conspiracies as a regular part of my work."

"I will select and create conspiratorial mechanisms that are not costly in time or resources because I am aware of the many free channels available to me (such as radio, television, and word of mouth)."

"I will organize a self-supporting high commando group that will create and perform evolutionary breakthrough actions on behalf of people and planet. One people, one planet."

"I will then pass this concept on to others who are capable of generating further self-organizing commando teams."

"I will await the time when my group can connect naturally with others at higher and higher levels of awareness and performance -- the Natural Guard!"

INITIATION CEREMONY

"Eerie" is the word that best describes the charter initiation of the First Earth Battalion." To quote Ron McRae:

"The First Earth Battalion's charter initiation was conducted at the second quarterly meeting of Task Force Delta. The group sat around a table at the Army War College officers' club at Fort Leavenworth, with a candle and a dollar bill at the center. Channon did an acupuncture technique to symbolize their bond to the earth and commitment to help one another realize their goal of a New Age army. A colonel did a karate form. The group chanted a mantra, a word or sound chanted to reach a higher state of consciousness -- in this case, a long E for 'earth.'"<9>

FUNDING AND STATUS

Literature referring to the First Earth Battalion has often called it a "mythical" unit. Channon is fond of saying it represents an "idea." As McRae points out, however, the First Earth Battalion is far more than a mere idea:

"Both West Point and the Command and Staff College include the First Earth Battalion in their human relations curricula, using a twenty-minute video tape prepared by West Point. Channon claims that more than 800 officers are in the network that distribute First Earth materials through the army chain of command. The army has loaned Channon, who dubs himself 'a hack Merlin' to a dozen other government agencies, including the Los Angeles and Seattle police departments, to explain First Earth concepts and Channon has requested official permission to speak, in uniform, on television and national radio featurettes. Until 1980, Channon was assigned to Fort Lewis, near Seattle, where he worked with the 'high-technology test bed,' a unit designated to test new equipment and ideas, including some developed by Task Force Delta. He is presently assigned to the staff of the Army War College."<10>

Channon has powerful support among top military brass. McRae notes that four star general Robert Shoemaker, the army's deputy chief of staff for personnel, calls Channon "the army's leading futurist" and an important model for the future. Other powerful military personnel supporting Channon include four star general, Glenn K. Otis, also a member of the Delta network, along with six major generals: Sam Wetzel, Dale Vesser, Bob Moore, Jack Merritt, James Ellis, and Bob Elton; three brigadier generals -- Allen Omo, Harden Olson, and Rick Brown; Dr. Sharon Lord, the Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Equal Opportunity and Safety.<11> I heard Marilyn Ferguson say in a 1982 speech that Sharon Lord was also a former Miss West Virginia and had conducted AQUARIAN CONSPIRACY study groups while she was stationed in Panama.

Influence among Veterans

Some Vietnam war veterans seem particularly responsive to programs such as those of Task Force Delta and its First Earth Battalion. Psychologist Arthur Egendorf served in Army intelligence in Vietnam. He was the coordinator of the first veteran "rap groups" held in New York City from 1970 to 1974. He serves on the President's Commission on Mental Health. He now urges upon his fellow veterans and countrymen -- "to transform warriorship" -- "to redirect the energy we once spent fighting or opposing the war in order to return to the original American dream: to return to the original American dream: to create 'out of many one,' and form 'a new order of the ages.'" Clearly, as he makes clear in subsequent pages of his book, he is advocating one and the same efforts as those put forth by Task Force Delta and its First Earth Battalion.<12>

But Is It Free?

Hard tax dollars have been spent on these New Age operations as well. Egendorf gives a figure of $4.5 million on Task Force Delta for its 80 various projects to experiment with human potential "on the battlefield and off!"<13>

Michael Aquino

As hard as the information may be to take on Jim Channon and the Task Force Delta, that does not tell the entire story. Promoted to Lt. Colonel recently, Michael Aquino is a practicing Satanist leader who has simultaneously run a Temple of Set Satanist cult in San Francisco while simultaneously touring NATO installations and serving in army Psy-Op operations. According to a source formerly close to the Temple of Set, Aquino operates under the high-ranking protection of Brig. General Vallely. Aquino's dedication to Satanist causes is so deep that he has had a 666 tattooed on his forehead!

Aquino used his European military tours to advantage for his cult as well as governmental business. He casually wrote his flock as follows:

"The reason for my silence during the past month is about to be explained; I have been out of the country. During the first part of October I participated in a series of tours of NATO installations in England, Belgium, and Germany arranged through the World Affairs Council. ... After the conclusion of the NATO tours, I was able to undertake a long-awaited personal quest. In 'That Other Black Order', an article on Nazi occultism which I wrote for Cloven Hoof #IV-4 (April VII), I recounted that Heinrich Himmler had appropriated a Westphalian castle, the Hewelsburg, and had modified it for ritual and Black Magical activities of the SS. The more I tried to obtain details concerning the Hewelsburg, the more frustrated I became....

"... upon returning to the medieval museum rooms with the curator, I inquired whether I might be able to spend some time in the Hall of the Dead alone. To my surprise he assented, providing that I sign in the log for the key. I did so, returned alone to the Hall, locked myself in, and undertook what I shall henceforth refer to as the Hewelsburg

Working."<1>

Just what was this "Wewelsburg Working" Aquino refers to "in a separate paper"? As Aquino writes, it is "to summon the Powers of Darkness at their most powerful locus!"<2> He graphically describes the sensations of a supreme possession he deliberately invoked!

"What emerged from this Working was First, the suction-like impression of the inflow of certain realizations and kinds of knowledge (accompanied by an almost 'electrical' sort of exhilaration), which seemed to have 'remained dormant' pending an activating' Working of this sort. Second, an extended 'reverberation' or 'echoing' of the focus of this Working within the Walhalla, culminating in its sending-forth into the material world."

"The central features of the various principal occultisms of the 19th and 20th centuries ... ran through my consciousness almost as a pageant. I understood the object of this to be an exposure of contrasts, inaccuracies, and inconsistencies -- a vast, spiraling dialectic designed to clear away the debris of sectarianism and superficiality in the search for the key principles of the true Powers of Darkness.

"Concepts of 'will', intelligence', self-consciousness', 'initiation', and 'magic' appeared in turn and fell aside as well; I saw them as useful, but still, surprisingly, peripheral to the central concept being approached. When at last all veils had been removed, and that concept was revealed, it was so simple as to seem at first anticlimactic and almost disappointing. It was: the phenomenon of life.

"Instantly I regretted my impatience and arrogance, my lapse into easy disappointment. Too many doors had been opened, too many forces unlocked and unleashed for this to be the ultimate impact of the Working. Then it was as though a 'test' were passed: The basic concept of 'life' became a sort of focal point, like that of a refractor telescope, through which the energies of the Working passed. The initial 'dialectic' had reduced all to a pinpoint of fact, and now that fact, unencumbered, was expanding to full significance."<3>

Aquino's "Working"

Aquino no longer recognizes the Christian dating system. He now dates everything from 1966 - Year of Founding of Church of Satan!<4> For example, his report on the NATO installations is dated 10/19/XVII (10/19/83).

Aquino explained to his Temple of Set members that he was visiting the Wewelsburg Nazi site while touring the NATO locations as part of the preparation for 1984 (XVIII).<5>

He had another and more important purpose, however. According to him, it was "to summon the Powers of Darkness at their most powerful locus." Aquino happily wrote home that he was "energized" by this experience. He simultaneously meditated on what he calls the "Order of the Trapezoid:" As Aquino told his temple members, the logo of this order is a 666!<6>

"I saw before me the sigil of the Order of the Trapezoid as originally designed by Anton LaVey: the pentagram within a trapezoid extending slightly below the two lower points, the three curved 6s, the trident rising from the flames of Hell. I saw its later design in the Church, the 6s and the flames now gone. I saw its first design in the Temple of Set: the Tcham scepter with the head and forked tail of Set replacing the Satanic trident. I saw Ronald Barrett's subsequent concept: a simple pentagram with the four upper points connected.

"So now the principle should be completed - the Law of the Trapezoid finally and completely fused into its emblem. There appeared then the Sigil of the Order as reproduced here. It is a return to the initial Sigil, with the Flame, whose emanations are rays, not flickering tongues. There are nine rays, each in strict mathematical proportion to the pentagram or trapezoid. The source-point of the Black flame completes the pentagram, as called for in the Book of Coming Forth by Night. Two of the rays of the Flame complete the inverse pentagon about the pentagram, creating a total of nine Golden Section trapezoids in the entire sigil. The three 6s are restored, but with no curved lines. The Set-headed and -tailed Tcham scepter of ancient Khem rises from the Black Flame, its head at the center of the pentagram. Its tail, against the three central rays of the Flame, forms a "W" denoting the 'Walhalla' or Hall of the Dead at Schloss Newelsburg, the Great Gate of the Powers of Darkness in our Time."

In this case, what becomes very evident is that Aquino sees the occult and his participation in Satanic activities as paths to personal power. He is evidently having organizational troubles with his Temple of Set in San Francisco and attempts to convince his flock in San Francisco, not to mention himself, of the great cosmic significance of their affairs. Whether Aquino is a major or a minor power in the occult hemisphere is not so much the case. Whether Aquino has intended to or not, however, he has dropped some deep

"cosmic truths." They are his observations that:

1. The right-handed path is a delusion.
2. Himmler's SS chamber was a laboratory for "conscious evolution."
3. LaVey's Church of Satan was the same thing.
4. "...all initiation is merely Russian roulette in fancy dress."

THE ARMY PSY-OP COMMUNITY

There is something of deeper significance than Aquino's participation in a San Francisco Satanic community, as disquieting as that may be. That is the fact of his participation and indeed the very existence of "psy-op" operations within the military. According to an article jointly written by Aquino's patron now Brigadier General and then Colonel Paul E. Valley, "psy-op" will play a vital role in the army of the future. Their article was entitled "From PSYOP to Mindwar: The Psychology of Victory." According to them, the U.S. Army already makes use of "psyop" (psychotronic research), even its relatively undeveloped stage:

"Psychotronic research is in its infancy, but the U.S. Army already possesses an operational weapons system designed to do what LTC Alexander would like ESP to do - except that this weapons system uses existing communications media. It seeks to map the minds of neutral and enemy individuals and then to change them in accordance with U.S. national interests. It does this on a wide scale, embracing military units, regions, nations, and blocs. In its present form it is called Psychological Operations (PSYOP.)"

And they do not limit the effective use of mind-changing, mind-altering techniques to the foreign battlefield. Aquino and Brig. Gen. Vallely say that this operation "MUST ORIGINATE AT THE NATIONAL LEVEL." As to whatever enemy is defined, they say "We must instill in it a predisposition to inevitable defeat."

The techniques they espouse are also espoused by Channon of the First Earth Battalion when he urges the use of "television cameras" as the weapon of the future -- "it must not only weaken the enemy; it must strengthen the United States:

"To this end MindWar must be strategic in emphasis, with tactical applications playing a reinforcing, supplementary role. In its strategic context, MindWar must reach out to friends, enemies, and neutrals alike across the globe - neither through the primitive 'battlefield' leaflets and loudspeakers of PSYOP nor through the weak, imprecise, and narrow effort of psychotronics - but through the media possessed by the United States which have the capabilities to reach virtually all people on the face of the Earth. These media are, of course, the electronic media - television and radio. State of the art developments in satellite communication, video recording techniques, and laser and optical transmission of broadcasts make possible a penetration of the minds of the world such as would have been inconceivable just a few years ago. Like the sword Excalibur, we have but to reach out and seize this tool; and it can transform the world for us if we have but the courage and the integrity to guide civilization with it!"

Vallely and Aquino decry the fact that "under existing United States law, PSYOP units may not target American citizens." They say their form of propaganda, were they allowed to target the American public would not be like that of the Nazi propaganda efforts of Joseph Goebbels, as "it must be axiomatic of Mind War that it always speaks the truth." However, it speaks the truth with this little wrinkle:

"Its power lies in its ability to focus recipients' attention on THE TRUTH OF THE FUTURE as well as that of the present"

To understand the full important of what Vallely and Aquino are calling for, one must first understand the principles of Skinnerian operant conditioning. Charlotte Isserbyt, a former Special Assistant in the Office of Educational Research and Improvement, United States Department of Education, and a former school board member in Camden, Maine lectures widely about the dangers of Skinnerian operant conditioning. She has done an excellent job of waking up many to the use of wide-scale Skinnerian operant conditioning in the schools. This is openly being done to reshape the value and belief systems of the students to incorporate a new "global consciousness." <8> Here, Vallely and Aquino would implement such conditioning populace wide -- foe and friend, citizen and alien alike. One's thinking is no longer one's own -- instead it is shaped by a appropriate rewards and punishments, subtly imposed, of course, so that the recipient hardly knows he is being brain-washed:

"The recipient of the statement will judge such messages not only by his conscious understanding of them, but also by the mental conditions under which he receives them. The theory behind 'brainwashing' was that physical torture and deprivation would weaken the mind's resistance to suggestion, and this was true to a point. But in the long run brainwashing does not work, because intelligent minds later realize their suggestibility under such conditions and therefore discount impressions and opinions inculcated accordingly.

"For the mind to believe in its own decisions, it must feel that it made those decisions without coercion. COERCIVE MEASURES USED BY THE MINDWAR OPERATIVE, CONSEQUENTLY, MUST NOT BE DETECTABLE BY ORDINARY MEANS. There is no need to resort to mind-weakening drugs such as those explored by the CIA; in fact the exposure of a single such method would do unacceptable damage to MindWar's reputation for truth. Existing PSYOP identifies purely-sociological factors which suggest appropriate idioms for messages. Doctrine in this area is highly developed, and the task is basically one of assembling and maintaining individuals and teams with enough expertise and experience to apply the doctrine effectively. This, however, is only the sociological dimension of target receptiveness measures. There are some purely natural conditions under which minds may become more or less receptive to ideas, and MindWar should take full advantage of such phenomena as atmospheric electromagnetic activity, air ionization, and extremely low frequency waves." <9>

DeTocqueville once said that America was great because she was good. He further noted that when America ceased to be good, she would cease to be great. Aquino and Vallely urge an all domineering America, bent on total world domination. Even assuming their motives were altruistic, which is doubtful, there are still "hidden dangers." Who is going to determine the pre-shaped thoughts and beliefs which we are all to possess? It is an old political maxim that power corrupts and absolute power corrupts absolutely. Whoever makes the decisions as to what the rest shall think has absolute power!
